*The theme for this Conference is: Engineering education: between the human and the digital.

As the world rapidly advances with technologies like generative AI, the importance of human-centered skills becomes increasingly evident. This shift not only impacts the engineering profession but also highlights similar challenges in the inherently human and social processes of learning. Understanding how engineering education can contribute to the development of sociotechnical skills in graduates and help to shape industry's use of AI in ways that are socially responsible and that enhance innovation are now important issues for educators and industry.
